'Ceramic. The Outer Layer of Architecture' is a collection of inspirational guides. Through a careful selection of impressive projects featuring Tile of Spain products, they highlight the importance of ceramic tiles in architecture and interior design.

The second volume of the collection is divided into five chapters—residential, contract market, façades, exteriors, and refurbishments products—, all focused on demonstrating what a safe bet Spanish tiles are thanks to their resistance, versatility, variety and high decorative appeal. A total of 56 projects are presented, with special emphasis on green building, sustainability and the Spanish tile sector's long traditions, illustrating the different applications and uses of Tile of Spain products in architecture and interior design through top-quality photos. The projects in this second volume feature tiles by a total of 34 Spanish brands, conceived to lend personality and a distinctive hallmark to each of the projects.

Volumes I and II of this bilingual Spanish/English monographic collection can be accessed at <https://library.tileofspain.com>. Printed versions are sent by post to top architects' studios in Spain and abroad and they are handed out to selected materials specifiers at events such as seminars and conferences.
